BY THE DOORWAY

During the summer of 1966-67 in Hobart, Tasmania, Australia, a group of my school friends & I were camping on Seven Mile Beach. It was "tradition" to wander the beach at night - it was a wonderful time of freedom and personal growth, with no drugs or alcohol. I was sitting in the hollow of a sand dune with a friend when another friend standing on top of the dune yelled to me to come quickly because there was a UFO. Thinking she was simply joking I ran up the dune (10ft) to see a row of very distinct bright white lights just hovering - it must have been about 2-3 miles away. The lights were so bright and pulsating that it was not possible to see the body of the craft, nor was there any sound. That is why I was surprised when my friend called me because any sound over the sea/peninsular and the surrounding bushland would have been immediately obvious at that time of night. The lights hovered for a couple of minutes in what seemed to be one place, then within seconds changed to pulsating red and slowly moved off to the right and disappeared over the horizon of low hills. After alerting the local newspaper Hobart Mercury they wrote a small column that indicated it was a cargo plane and nobody believed just what we had seen.

Whilst driving through an estate near the Kings Lynn Bypass (The Fairstead Est.) On my last pizza delivery for the night I observed some quarter of a mile away a distinctive bright bluish star. I slowed the van down to a stop as this star? It was hanging as if it were well below celestial parameters. I watched for about 2 minutes then suddenly the star just vanished, as though extinguished. I wound down my driver-side window and above me some 80ft I observed a silent craft some 40ft long, ten feet from the base to the dome-shaped aperture, move perhaps 5 mph slowly and effortlessly across the clear sky. Its colour was consistent with a piece of metal cooling down as though just removed from a forge. It was a dull rusty-red. From beneath I could see a row of orange lights or perhaps some exhaust ports because as they switched on - the space in front of the craft began to shake as if shimmering and then the craft slowly went through it and disappeared. Is it possible that the star observed earlier was some sort of portal to which the craft came into our dimension. (An interesting observation. Data R..)

Whilst driving through an estate near the Kings Lynn Bypass. (fairstead-est). On my last Pizza delivery for the night. I observed some  $\frac{1}{4}$  mile away a distinctive bright bluish star. I slowed the Van down to a stop, as this star? was hanging as it were, well below Celestial parameters. I watched for about 2 mins, then all of a sudden the star vanished, as though 'Extinguished'. I wound down my driver side window, to see observe any other phenomenon associated with this. I was quickly rewarded? Above me, some 80ft, I observed the following, the sighting the Encounter was clear and as of a 'Nuts and Bolts' Solidness.

[ I watched a 'Silent-craft' some 40ft long. Ten ft from the base to the dome-shaped aperture, move perhaps 5mph slowly and effortlessly across the clear sky. Its colour was consistent with a piece of metal 'cooling'

'down' as though just removed from a forge. It was a dull rusty-red.

From beneath I then observed a row of orange-lights, or perhaps more 'accurately' Exhaust-ports' suddenly switch on. Immediately this array of ports switched on, the front space in front of the Craft, began to 'Shake', like spacetime was fluxing, a mirror-type door or 'portal' was forming. And I watched as the Craft entered/exited through this opened gateway, slowly vanishing before my eyes. During this time, about 5-10 mins, I instinctively knew they the occupants were aware of my presence, my viewing.

And a thought occurred I might suddenly be 'beamed aboard their ship?'

It is my view that the 'Star' observed earlier was no Star (but an open Dimensional-portal) through which this Craft had entered our timescale?

Was I afraid NO. Was I shaken NO. It must be understood that from an Early childhood, I have been AWARE, and perceptive to Other-Realms. There is much I could talk upon, however I leave you to your own thoughts and devices.
